He Has Modified His Amendment Resolution.

ATTITUDE OF SOUTHERN PEOPLE

Senator Morgan, of Alabama, Makes a Forcible Speech—The News From Washington.

Special to the TELEGRAM.

Washington, Jan. 9—Several of the Southern States are interested in the matter of the final settlement of their accounts with the federal government, and many of them, including Virginia, North and South Carolina, Florida, and other states, have or will have bills for this purpose introduced in the senate and house.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, the other day, secured the passage through the senate of a couple of resolutions inquiring of the Treasury Department the status of the accounts between the United States, and the state of South Carolina, growing out of the wars of 1812, and out of the Indian wars. The treasury department it was announced on Monday was preparing the information requested for the use of the senate, pursuant to the Tillman resolution, and it will be sent to the senate as soon as it is possible to do so.

Among the measures of this character now pending is one in the house introduced by Representative Sparkman, for the purpose of settling the account between the federal government and the state of Florida. Mr. Sparkman stated on Monday that he would press this measure vigorously in the house of representatives, and he hopes that there may be some legislation of interest to the southern states before long.

Representative Hawley, of Texas, who has just returned from Cuba, via of Jacksonville, was on the floor of the house of representatives Monday. The Texas congressman expressed himself as much pleased with his visit to Cuba, and the result of his investigations as to the condition of affairs existing on the island.

Accompanying Mr. Hawley back to Washington were Quartermaster General Humphrey, who has been stationed at Havana for some time, and who comes north for the purpose of getting supplies and provisions. Lieutenant G L. Tanner, also accompanied the party from Cuba. Gen. Humphrey and Lieut. Tanner are stopping at the Ebbitt House.

The resolution of Senator Pritchard, which was offered some time ago, and which is aimed at the proposed amendment to the state constitution, declaring same to be in conflict with the federal constitution, came before the United States senate yesterday, and Senator Morgan, of Alabama, took the floor in opposition. The Alabama senator in a forcible speech declared clearly, and without equivocation the attitude of the southern people on the question of negro suffrage. Senator Pritchard has modified his resolution, so as to declare that election laws heretofore passed in the south, framed similarly, to the proposed North Carolina amendment are unconstitutional, without undertaking to declare the North Carolina amendment unconstitutional in advance of its passage in so many terms. The resolution is the first time in the history of the senate that that body has taken upon itself the powers delegated by the United States constitution to the supreme court of the United States. If the original amendment in North Carolina and other southern states are unconstitutional, a resolution of the senate declaring them so, is equally unconstitutional, for that is a power vested in the supreme court, and not in the senate, house, nor in congress itself.

Senator Pritchard, of North Carolina has gone to Laurinburg, North Carolina, where he was to open the republican campaign in opposition to the constitutional amendment last night. The senator will return Washington tomorrow, it is thought.

Senator Martin, of Virginia, was among the callers on President McKinley Monday morning. The senator called in reference to some state matters which were not of deep importance.

Several Maryland people have gone to Annapolis for the purpose of witnessing the inauguration of Hon. John Walter Smith as governor of the state to succeed Governor Lowndes. The adjournment of the house over until Wednesday, and the fact that that day is to be devoted to eulogies, enabled nearly the entire Maryland delegation in congress, and many other congressmen to go to Annapolis. It is expected that Wednesday morning a large delegation will go from this city to visit the inauguration ceremonies.

Mr. and Mrs. Peters, of Worcester, Mass., who have been in the city several days, have gone to Charlotte. Mr. Peters wants to manufacture cigars and tobacco and is looking for a place to locate.

We are sorry to hear of an accident which befell Mrs. Donahue Smith. While attempting to descend a flight of steps she fell and hurt herself to such an extent that the services of a doctor were needed. She is better today and has promise of being well in a few days, we are glad to know.

Miss Carolyn Whitten, one of Henderson's popular and accomplished young ladies, who has been visiting in this city for several weeks, returned home last night. While here Miss Whitten made many acquaintances and friends who were loath to part with her.

Two little negroes about twelve years of age by the names of Hargrave and Cossy got into a scrap yesterday afternoon about half-past four o'clock and as a result of the fracas Cossy was stabbed in the back with a knife in the hands of Hargrave. We are told that they commenced to quarrel at first, and then Cossy threw some rocks at Hargrave, after which they came together with the result as above stated. The wound is a dangerous, though not necessarily fatal one—it extends almost to the heart. A preliminary hearing was to have been given before Magistrate Scherestlast night, but was postponed on account of the defendant's side not being ready for trial. The trial took place this morning. Hargrave was sent to jail on the 11:38 train to await next term of court at Greensboro.

SHOOTING AT MAYODAN.

Nat Hammons Killed by Policeman Brown.

Special to The Telegram.

Winston, Jan. 9—News has just reached here of a shooting at Mayodan Friday night in which Nat Hammons was killed by Policeman Hub Brown.

Hammons and Bob Scales were drinking, and becoming disorderly, were arrested. There being no guardhouse, they were taken to the mayor's office and placed under guard of two policemen, Will Benton and Hub Brown.

Hammons grew restless and remarked that he was going of there or kill somebody. He stepped toward the door and as the officers interfered he began cutting at them.

He succeeded in inflicting a slight wound upon Benton, when Brown drew his revolver and fired three shots. The third shot took effect in the heart of Hammons and death was instantaneous. The other two shots were wild and took no effect.

A coroner's jury was empaneled and on Saturday night rendered a verdict of justifiable homicide.

"Captain Dick" in Concord.

A special to the Charlotte Observer from Concord says: "The Ladies' Aid Society of the Central M. E. church held its monthly meeting with Mrs. R. A. Brown, this afternoon. The drama, "Captain Dick," by home talent, under the directorship of the Willard-Bertram Company will be enacted here on the the 2nd of March for the benefit of this society."

The people of Greensboro no doubt remember the treat afforded them in the presentation of "Captain Dick" during gala week, and will be much gratified to know that the authors are meeting with such success. It is one of the best plays that has visited Greensboro in some time.

London, Jan. 9—Despatch from Glasgow, by mail, states positively that General Joubert has been seriously injured, that his horse was shot under him and the animal rolled over upon him, injuring him so severely that he will be unable to take further active part in the war. This report has no official confirmation.

The Manchester Guardian affirms that the disaster to the British arms at Colesburg was due to the cowardice of the Suffolk Regiment. This allegation is confirmed by a despatch received by the London news agency, saying the Suffolks were seized with panic and most of them flew from the field. Those remaining, including the officers, were overwhelmed by the superior force of the Boers and either annihilated or captured.

A GOOD OPENING.

The News From Whitsett by Our Regular Contributor.

Correspondence Telegram.

Whitsett, N. C., Jan 9—The school has a good opening—New students arrive daily—Postoffice changes. Never before in the history of the institution has there been such an increase of students in the spring term. We have no other cause to attribute this to, save that the young people of Old North Carolina have come to the conclusion that to battle for intellectual supremacy far surpasses the days of Olympian games.

Monroe, one of the progressive towns of North Carolina, has sent, if we mistake not, five representatives. Rocky Mount sends her share, six being the number Greensboro, this year, however, sends only one representative.

Students from Stokes, Warren, New Hanover, Chatham, Jones, Vance, Gaston, Union, Rockingham, Sampson, Wake, Rowan and Mecklenburg counties are the last to be registered.

J. Vance Dick, who teaches a school some few miles away, is sick, it is thought of pneumonia. We sincerely trust, however, that he will soon recover and resume his work in a few days.

When the news was heralded last week that Mr. J D Oldham, the clever and obliging postmaster, had lost the postoffice, the statement seemed almost incredible, but upon close investigation it was found that the honest and honorable Charles T. M. Clapp, another one of our valued citizens, had been appointed to succeed his worthy predecessor. Mr. Clapp is worthy of public confidence, and no doubt will make a good postmaster.

After Father Worth.

Mr W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, writes Superintendent Mebane that the school board of Randolph county will bring action against Treasurer Worth to compel payment of its part of the $100,000 appropriation. Mr. Hammer writes: "I shall advise the officials of this county at the meeting this week to take legal steps to get the state fund for the use of the schools this year." Mr. Hammer is superintendent of schools for Randolph county.

Treasurer Worth said yesterday that only one warrant sent out to the county treasurers has been sent in so far and it was returned.—News & Observer.

In going over our stock we find too many men's winter weight tan and russet shoes on hand, good, new up-to-date shoes, nothing in the world the matter with them except that the mild weather just before Christmas retarded the sale somewhat on this class of goods. And if you want some good, warm winter underwear in white, gray or camel's hair we can fix you up all right at very little expense.

TUESDAY, JAN. 9, 1900.

Senator Pritchard, in taking the lead in opposition to the constitutional amendment, has a job on his hands that will hold him for awhile. If every man who tackles him succeeds in dissecting and scattering to the four winds his breastworks and habiliments of war, as did Senator Morgan, of Alabama, yesterday, then there's walking ahead for the Senator.

There'll pretty soon be a launching in the Dan river at Danville. Richmond has recently shoved two little torpedo boats into the Jim river, but the events attending the launching were nothing as compared to what Danville will see when the Daily Bee launches the political "Machine." The Bee will pretend to do the thing right, but in reality its intentions are to sink the "Machine." Let everybody attend the sinking.

We offer no apology for the amount of space we surrender today to the extract from Hon. C. H. Mebane's speech here sometime ago at a reception given the ministers, teachers and editors by the W. C. T. U. of this city. It is better reading than anything we could write, and if carefully read and studied will do ten times more good than a thousand times the space in wretched details of murders, homicides, lynchings and wars. We recommend it to your careful consideration.

CALLING FOR SOBER MEN.

Hon. C. H. Mebane on Intoxicants and Narcotics.

The following is an extract from an address delivered by State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Hon C. H. Mebane, at the reception given by the W. C. T. U., of Greensboro, to the ministers, teachers and editors:

It is singular, but nevertheless true, that we as a people are slow to change our views or opinions upon any subject; especially is this true of us in regard to certain customs which we have received from our forefathers. It is natural for any generation of people to be largely influenced by its environments. This is strikingly true of individuals as well.

We take as an illustration a child whose home life and home influence has been one in which he has been taught and had impressed upon his mind that Martin Luther was a great man, that his doctrine and ideas of religion were just in accordance with the bible, in short, let Luther be held up for his ideal of man, and the natural result to expect is, that this child will be an admirer, if not a follower of Luther.

The customs in home life are carried on into manhood and womanhood by a large part of our people.

It is perfectly natural for boys and girls to regard as the right to eat and drink that which their fathers did.

We have heard our fathers and mothers speak of the "good old times," when each farmer or a majority, made their own brandy on their own premises. When the head of the household considered, that he was honoring his guest by setting before him a glass well filled with the best sparkling wine or filled with the most ancient brandy. He was proud to be able to offer him a glass of brandy 6 or 8 years old. The older the better.

In those days the leaders in some of the churches made whiskey and thought they were doing no wrong. In those days we heard very few if any temperance sermons, setting forth the evil consequences of strong drink.

In short, public opinion and public sentiment had not realized the awful consequences that must some day follow as a result of strong drink and narcotics, made and used by the people.

Public opinion and public sentiment form a tremendous power. We have seen and heard of strong, brave men, who could face the mouth of a cannon, and yet the same men would falter and stagger before public opinion.

When public sentiment and public opinion say the saloon must go, then, and not until then will it go.

Public sentiment has changed a great deal within the last twelve or fifteen years. A few years ago you would not find many men in public places who would express themselves very freely upon the subject, and of course, there are some now who will not, but those who see the "Ram's Horn," will remember the issue of Nov. 11th contains the names of governors, United States senators and others in public positions, who speak out plainly in no uncertain sound upon the subject.

There have been various influences brought to bear upon the public mind and conscience, and I am glad to know that the W. C. T. U. has had no small share of this work. This organization has been well called an "organized motherhood."

Motherhood, the very name calls to mind that which on earth is holiest, purest and most Christlike; namely, the love and devotion in the heart of a mother.

This term implies that you have little ones to love, to care for, to save from the evils of our modern life.

In the pulpit have been brave, God-fearing men who have dared to stand upon the walls of Zion and declare that "wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

In the press, we have found articles setting forth the evils of strong drink and baneful effects of the poisonous cigarette

In the schoolroom we have had some faithful teachers who have lived lives of temperance and purity and also taught the evils of intoxicants and narcotics.

But notwithstanding public sentiment has grown a great deal, it is still a child of small growth. It cannot even stand alone, much less walk, in some communities, and especially in some towns where you can stand in one spot and count six, eight or ten church steeples almost piercing the sky.

What! did I say public sentiment could not stand alone amid such scenes as this? Yes, this is I am sorry to say is so. When public sentiment on a question is weak, then individuals are weak. In such a community as this we find individual church members who will not say one word against the saloon. The saloon man rents a house from him, or perhaps trades with him. He will not say anything against the cigarette or tobacco, because he may use it himself, or it may injure certain business interests.

Among politicians we need not expect sentiment for or against any moral question.

The politician is with the people and for the dear people, first and last and all the time, provided, however, he gets what he wants for himself.

Here is the lesson to learn from the politician: get public sentiment right and the politician will be right, or I should say he will advocate right measures.

So long as good people will vote for men for public office who drink, just so long we will have men in public office who drink.

Let public sentiment demand that all political parties shall nominate decent, sober men for office, then we will have them.

Let the home, the pulpit, the platform and the press make public sentiment as they can and may do.

Let the 8,190 public school teachers make sentiment against intoxicants and narcotics The way the rising generation will be reached, if at all, will be by a union of these forces.

Among teachers, if you will pardon a personal allusion, is where I have tried to do my duty. I want no man or woman, in years to come to say that if I had spoken out plainly he or she would not have made a wreck of life

I counted the cost. I knew what it meant to say some of the things I have said, but, so help me God, I will stand up and plead for the boys and girls of this state if I never receive another vote so long as I live. I would rather be the humble means of helping boys and girls become sound, pure men and women than to be superintendent of public instruction of the great state of North Carolina forever.

The time is not far distant when the man who stands behind the sacred desk will not dare to puff a cigar or chew tobacco.

It is a shame that any minister will do so now in my opinion. I have heard ministers make eloquent pleas for means to carry on the work of the church, heard of the great sacrifices poor, faithful women had made to give fifty cents or a dollar to the cause of missions, and yet these same men would spend twenty-five or fifty cents for cigars, and go into the pulpit full of tobacco fumes and talk about denying ourselves and making sacrifices. Some may say if he pays for it out of his salary, it's nobody's business. Just as well say if the poor laborer pays his saloon bill out of his earnings it is nobody's business but his own.

I have the same opinion of the president of a college or a professor in a college or a teacher anywhere using tobacco that I have of the minister who uses it. These men are to be and are leaders of the rising generations. Josh Billing once said: "If you want your children brought up in the right way you must walk that way yourself." So if ministers and teachers want to lead the young in the right paths, they must also walk that way themselves.

Let us look for a moment at this question as a matter of business. The saving of what is spent for intoxicants would increase mechanical employment. It would increase the number of jobs rather than diminish them except the jobs for policemen, and criminal courts; the number of these, of course, would be diminished.

The business world of today is calling for sober men as never before, especially in certain lines.

The railroads do not want the services of a man who becomes intoxicated. In fact, most positions of great responsibility in the business world are filled by men who can and must keep sober.

How many men would be out of employment in Greensboro if the dispensary were closed? Simply the men engaged there and perhaps one or two policemen, but on the other hand, how many men who work one or two days in the week would then work six days?

But do not we receive taxes from liquor license to support the public schools? Yes, we received during the school year ending June, 1899, from liquor license, according to reports sent to the superintendent of public instruction, $71,122.36.

Can we do without this? Have we not been pleading for more money for public schools? Most assuredly we have.

In the state of Maine under prohibition we find no backward movements in public education for want of money received from liquor license.

Can we do without the tax on liquor? Can we do without the $71,000? This money is a tax indeed. Who pays this $71,000? Why the liquor dealer, of course! I deny this. It is paid for with the money that ought to buy clothing and bread for thousands of hungry children; the money that ought to be spent for the comfort of thousands of wearied mothers and wives whose heart strings are almost torn asunder, because of the woe and sorrow heaped upon them. Here is where the state of North Carolina gets its $71,000. This gives the children of the state about 6 days school. I ask is not this paying dear for only 6 days school?

Where is the man who would not be willing to cut off, if need be, six days of his child's school if by doing so he could help his neighbor be a man, help his neighbor buy the comforts of life for his wife and children, yes, even help his neighbor to add 6 months school for his children with what he now wastes on intoxicants?

I do not believe that we would lose the six days, if we could abolish the saloon, but I believe we could add weeks to our school term. If this were done, then men would have money to pay taxes. Just suppose we could add the enormous amount spent for intoxicants to our public school fund; if so we could have a school for the entire state for eight or ten months each year.

Oh the young lives and hearts that might be made bright and happy if the money spent for tobacco alone by their fathers could be spent for good books

The man who spends 50 cents a week spends $26 a year. This would purchase 12 or 15 volumes of the best literature. The man who spends this much for tobocco, could within a few years have asplendid library in his home.

But oh, I hear some say, when will these Utopian visions ever be made living realities? When will men love their wives and children more than they love intoxicants and tobacco? In short, when will men be men and women be women in the highest, truest, sense of these terms?

I do not expect to live to see all of these conditions come to pass, but I hope to live to see some movements made in these directions. I do hope to see some of the children, in homes made destitute, on account of intemperate fathers, grow up to become strong, pure men and women—men and women who will ever oppose that which brought poverty and shame upon them in their childhood days.

I do hope to see the day when men and women who call themselves christians will have the manhood and moral courage to stand united against the evils of strong drink and the deadly cigarette; when christian men will not vote for a whiskey man or drinker, because he belongs to a certain political party.

We must bring about reforms by and through parties, but the time should never come in the life of a christian man or minister when he will vote for a whiskey man on any party ticket. I hope to see the day when enough men shall do this so that every man who expects public office must know the first thing for him to do is to be a sober man, and be an advocate of laws to make sober citizens.

What are we going to about our boys smoking cigarettes?

Is it true that any real harm comes as the result of smoking cigarettes?

To this audience this question may seem absurd. But we may have many good people who see no harm in them.

I recently saw an account of a bond and security company which had losses to pay on seven hundred young men who had gone wrong. This company made careful inquiry as to the lives and habits of these young men, and this alarming fact was revealed; viz., that every single one of the 700 young men smoked cigarettes! What a lesson to boys? Science has already proven that cigarettes and tobacco injure the the physical constitution, but we have it clearly shown that the moral nature of these boys was weakened and depraved by the cigarettes. This company believes it, because one of the questions added for applicants wishing security is this: Do you smoke cigarettes?

What is the remedy? The remedy that was effective when I was a boy was a good switch in the hands of my faithful mother. But we have made progress since then, you know.

Now if a mother's son at the age of 10, 12 or 15 years smokes cigarettes or uses tobacco she ferrets the fact, she tries to reason with the boy, who informs his mother, or father as the case may be, that he is not a baby, he is not going to be hurt; in short, he is a man and will do as he pleases.

If all the boys of today had mothers like mine was to me, the cigarette companies would be in the hands of receivers in less than six months. God bless the fathers and mothers who control and govern well their children, even if they have to use the rod to do so. "A little child shall lead them" is literally true in many homes today. Often the precious child leads the father in the way of truth and life. A picture of this kind is, indeed, one to make men and angels rejoice, but too often parents allow the little ones to lead them in the wrong direction for the good of the children. We need better discipline and government of children in our own homes.

But we cannot depend on the home influence alone to protect thousands of our boys and girls. We must have the aid of public opinion against these evils; then we will have all laws that are necessary; then will the cigarette habit among children be blotted out.

I rejoice that the children of this age are receiving the attention of the best brain and talent of the world. I rejoice on account of the golden opportunities they now have which are far superior to those of their grandfathers. But I lament the fact that they have many temptations which their grandfathers did not have; especially is this true of our towns and cities.

I rejoice on account of what woman has done to remove the temptations of our youth. In the cause of temperance reform, may the good women of our land be inspired by the life and work of the greatest woman of the 19th century, Frances E. Willard. May her spirit, hover over the womanhood of this country, guiding to higher, nobler, purer life and work.

Let the mothers of this land be made to realize as they have never done before how awful are their responsibilities.

Let the sisters feel as never before how much they can and should do for the purity of their brothers' lives and characters.

Let brothers live as pure and spotless lives as they wish for their sisters.

Let men be men, and let us all use our tongues, our press and our lives so as to help the rising generation to be sober, God-fearing men and women.

A TALK ON ASBESTUS

SOME LIGHT UPON HOW LONG IT HAS BEEN IN USE.

A Man With a Mine of Information Astonishes Another Who Knew All About the Mineral, but Who Would Not Take a Tempting Bet.

An elderly man, with a gray mustache, looked up from a plate of spaghetti which he was eating in a restaurant and spoke to three others:

"Say," he said, "what do you people know about asbestus?"

Two of his companions preserved a modest silence, but the third, who was a little man, spoke up:

"I know all about asbestus," he said.

"Do, eh?" queried the man with the spaghetti on his plate. "Then how long's it been in use?"

"Well," said the little man, hesitatingly, "p'raps 80 years."

"You're away off. Of course you didn't know that Charlemagne had an asbestus tablecloth?"

"Who's Charlemagne?"

"Well," said the elderly man, "Charlemagne was king of the Franks and emperor of the Romans about 1,100 years ago. He was a great fighter and owned an asbestus tablecloth."

"Don't believe it," said the little man. "I never heard of asbestus until the Centennial."

"Well, Charlemagne had the cloth all right," said the elderly man. "He used to astonish his friends from the interior by throwing the tablecloth into the fire after dinner, and of course it didn't burn. Asbestus became quite fashionable after that for towels and napkins. It saved laundry bills. All a man's wife had to do was to throw the week's wash into the stove and it came out as clean as chalk."

"Say," said the little man, incredulously, "do you think you can string me like that?"

"It's so," declared the elderly man. "But of course you never heard that Benjamin Franklin had an asbestus purse?"

"No. Had he?" asked the little man, with a sneer.

"Of course he had. He took it over to England with him and sold it to a man in Bloomsbury, London, for a big sum."

"I suppose," said the little man, with a wink, "that the Englishman was a friend of yours, and you know his name."

"No," replied the first man, "I never saw him, but he was called Sir Hans Sloane, and he had a museum."

"Dime museum?" grinned the little man.

"Not a bit of it," smiled the elderly man good naturedly. "It was a sure enough museum, and as a matter of fact it constituted the nucleus of the British museum. I dare say that Benjamin Franklin's asbestus purse is there yet."

The little man looked a little crestfallen, but the elderly man consoled him.

"Don't worry," he said, "there are lots of people besides yourself who are shy on knowledge regarding asbestus. It wasn't much used during recent centuries. In 1670 an asbestus handkerchief was shown to the Royal society as a great curiosity by Dr. Plot, who had bought it from a traveler on his return from China. They called it salamander's wool. Dr. Plot saturated the handkerchief with oil and threw it into a fierce charcoal fire. The oil burned off, but the handkerchief remained intact. The fellows of the society were much interested and were not greatly surprised when the price of asbestus in Chinese Tartary was quoted at $400 a Chinese ell, which isn't much more than an English yard. It's likely that the price had risen since the days of the ancients, for those old fellows had big sheets of asbestus, which they wound around corpses before cremating them."

"That's a long time ago," said the little man sententiously.

"Well," continued the elderly man, "if you want to come down to later years, there was a book published in London, 40 years ago, giving accounts, among other things, of remarkable experiments previously made at Milan, in Italy, by the Chevalier Aldini, who had used asbestus in the construction of a suit of fireproof armor. The coverings for arms, legs and body were of heavy cloth which had been soaked in a strong solution of alum. The helmet, gauntlets and stockings were of asbestus. Then there was an overdress, covering the body, thighs and feet, of wire gauze, 20 meshes to the inch. With this armor on, men stood on a big gridiron over a blazing fire for ten minutes and buried their heads in piles of burning hay and shavings, but nevertheless they came out unharmed. They also handled bars of white hot iron and did other things which seemed quite miraculous. That was over 40 years ago."

"Well," said the little man, "it's hard to believe that for several hundreds of thousands of years the world was so full of chumps that there wasn't room for a man smart enough to utilize asbestus. On the whole, I guess I'll go on doubting."

"All right," returned the elderly man. "I've got $5,000 that says I'm right. Perhaps your doubts are strong enough to uphold a bet of $10 against it."

But the little man wouldn't bet.—New York Times.

THE MOLINEUX TRIAL.

Molineux's Knowledge of Chemistry Shown by a Witness.

New York, Jan. 8—The developments in today's proceedings in the trial of Roland B. Molineux for the murder of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams, brought the hope that the prosecution would get through with its case by the end of the present week. Three witnesses gave important testimony. Morris Herrman, a member of the firm in Newark for which Mr. Molineux was superintendent, said that the firm of Morris Herrman & Co. went into the dry color business in 1896 with Mr. Molineux as superintendent and it was upon the latter's knowledge of dry colors and chemical recipes that they started to work. Evidence was introduced last week to show the case with which is alleged to have killed Mrs Adams, could be produced by a combination of dry colors.

Edwin B. Hay, of Washington, testified as an expert in handwriting. He gave it as his opinion that the letters signed "Barnett" and "Cornish" and the admitted handwritings were written by the same person. He also said it was his opinion that the admitted handwritings and disputed writings in the "Burnett" and "Cornish" letters and that of the poison package address were all written by one man and that man was the prisoner at the bar. Mr. Hay then gave his reasons for reaching this conclusion and his recital of the resemblances and characteristics in the writings were similar to those made by Kinsley, Tyrrell, Tolman and Ames, who testified as handwriting experts.

Alfred H. Graham, paying teller of the bank of North America, testified to having received the writings in evidence in the case and of having carefully studied them. He said there was absolutely no doubt in his mind that the address on the poison package and that on the bogus "Harnet" and "Cornish" letters were all written by the same hand that wrote the admitted letters.

PYTHIAN MEETING.

Installation of Officers and an Oyster Supper.

Greensboro Lodge No. 80, Knights of Pythias, had a very interesting meeting in their castle hall last night. It was the time for installation of officers for the ensuing term and that work was done by District Deputy J. L. Brockmann. The following officers were installed:

A. A. Johnson, C. C.
J. H. Denny. Prel.
C. C. McLean, K. of R. & S.
J. S. Ingram, M. at A.
R. M. Phillips becomes Sitting Past Chancellor. The other officers-elect were not present The attendance was larger than usual, and two or three visiting Knights were present. There was also work in the second degree, and a pleasant evening was spent.

After the lodge meeting all present were invited to repair to West's Cafe, where oysters, coffee, etc, were served.

OPEN AIR CONCERT

And Parade Tomorrow Night on South Elm Street.

The Knights of the Mystic Chain (Gate City) Band will give an open air concert tomorrow night on South Elm street from the deport to the court house. A number of selections will be rendered, and while marching will use one of the "warmest" pieces in the collection. The time of this open air concert will be from 7 to 7:45 p. m.

Just after the concert, which will wind up in front of Odd Fellows' hall on West Market street, a local lodge of Knights of the Mystic Chain will be organized. The list already contains over 125 names and the lodge will be an entusiastic one from the start.

MR. J. T. SHIELDS DEAD.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Shields Leave to Attend the Funeral.

On account of the death of Mr. Jas. T. Shields, written for yesterday's paper, was, by some inadvertence, omitted.

Mr. Shields, who was a brother of M. L. Shields, of this city, died Saturday night in Boerne, Tex. He was 40 years old, and had been in bad health for some years. Up to a few years ago he was in business in Knoxville with his brother, M. L. Shields, and was a man of exceptional business ability. He has, since retiring from business, traveled in the interest of his health, and it was in search of health that carried him to Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Shields left last night to attend the funeral, which takes place today at the old home at Bean Station, Tenn.

"A Country Visitor."

"A Country Visitor" was presented at the Academy of Music last night to a medium sized house. With the exception of the acting of Harry Green and Miss De Conde, the show was very ordinary. A cornet solo by a lady of the troupe was very nicely done.

A few stereoptican views were presented between the third and last acts—the destruction of the Maine, and pictures of the heroes of the war. Admiral Schley's picture elicited considerable applause, while Sampson's was hissed. Dewey's passed with very little demonstration either way. This part of the show illustrated the feelings of Greensboro people, at least, in regard to these three men.

Two Fingers Cut Off.

An unfortunate accident befell Mr. C. E. Hegwood, an employe of the Greensboro Furniture Factory, this morning. He was at work at the jointer, a kind of planing machine dressing a short piece of timber, when the blades struck a knot, causing his hand to slip and three figers of the left hand were caught. The thumb and fore-finger escaped, the middle finger was slightly injured, while the two last were cut entirely off near the second joints.

Drs Roberson and Battle dressed the injured hand and it is hoped that Mr. Heywood will soon be ready for duty again. He is a man of family and lives on Bellevue street.
